ACADEMIC Excellence

WPI Students Complete Intensive Capstone Research Projects

Almost 1,200 undergraduate students at Worcester Polytechnic (WPI) completed a senior capstone thesis that is required of all graduating seniors as part of the university's distinctive project-based educational experience. Known as Major Qualifying Projects (MQP), these are professional-level research experiences in the students' fields of study that challenge students to solve the kind of problem they would typically encounter in their professional discipline.

The following students completed an MQP:

Sean Sullivan from North Haven, majoring in Industrial Engineering, class of 2025, completed a project titled "Saint-Gobain Abrasives: Optimizing LDCO Finishing Process."

Jillian Burns from Wallingford, majoring in Biomedical Engineering, class of 2025, completed a project titled "Soft Substrates, Small Molecules: Stem Cell Differentiation."

Lexi Carim from Wallingford, majoring in Electrical and Computer Engineering, class of 2025, completed a project titled "Developing Hybrid Renewable Solutions for Residential Living."

Kristine Roy from Wallingford, majoring in Chemical Engineering, class of 2025, completed a project titled "Oxidative Promotion of Polypropylene Decomposition."
