PHOTOS

Fair introduced students to global experiences

Lily Rand
Photo Editor

On Nov. 4, the university hosted the "SCSU Study Abroad Fair" in the Adanti Student Center Ballroom, showcasing international academic opportunities available to students. Representatives shared information about semester-long, yearlong and direct-enrollment programs across Europe, Asia, Australia and other locations. Attendees explored options for studying abroad, internships and faculty-led programs while speaking directly with program representatives and university staff. Free food was provided, and giveaways were distributed to the first 150 attendees. The event offered students an opportunity to learn about academic experiences beyond the United States and gain information about application requirements, program costs and cultural immersion opportunities.

For more go to page 2

Photos: Mateusz Gazdzicki

Representative talking about oppurtunites in Paris, France.

Spokesperson explains benefits of learning in Costa Rica.

American Institute for Foreign Study representative introducing study abroad and internship oppurtunities.

Event introduction sign.

Psychology major Gage Ramirez and special-elementary education collaborative major Alyssa Hall, sophomores, and nursing major Yamilett Escalera Beaulieu, a freshman, standing at the Study Abroad Fair.

'First Generation Alumni Panel' gives guidance

Lead Trainer and Program Director at Allan Houston Legacy Foundation Barry Woods Jr. talking about his experiences.

Students listening to the panelists.

Lily Rand
Photo Editor

On Friday, Nov. 6, the university hosted the "First Generation Alumni Panel," bringing together first-generation alumni to share their experiences navigating college and building successful careers. The event, hosted by University Access Programs, featured a panel of alumni from a variety of professional fields, including business, healthcare, education, financial services and nonprofit leadership. Panelists discussed challenges they faced as first-generation students and offered advice on academic achievement, career development and personal growth. Attendees had the opportunity to ask questions, hear personal success stories and learn strategies for overcoming obstacles both in college and the workforce. The event also highlighted the Owls Empowering Owls Alumni Mentorship Initiative, which connects students with alumni mentors for guidance and networking opportunities.

For more go to page 1

Photos: William Gagné

First generation alumni panelists standing with Interim President Sandra Bulmer after the event.

Interim President Sandra Bulmer introduces the panelists.

Chief Experience Officer at Yale New Haven Health Tina Bennett talking to students.