PHOTOS

Discover the world at Study Abroad Fair

Lily Rand
Photo Editor

On Nov. 18, the annual Study Abroad Fair took place in the Adanti Student Center Ballroom. The event invited students to explore opportunities to study abroad through short-term faculty-led programs or semester-long exchanges at partner universities around the world. Attendees met with faculty program leaders, connected with international partners and learned about scholarship and funding options that made global education accessible. The fair highlighted 30 partnerships with institutions in countries including Germany, France, England, Australia, China, Japan, South Korea, Chile, Spain and Italy. Studying abroad allowed students to immerse themselves in new cultures, gain professional skills and earn academic credit while traveling. An international buffet was also available, which made the event both informative and engaging. The fair emphasized that studying abroad was not only an academic opportunity but also a chance to grow personally, build resilience and prepare for success in an increasingly interconnected world.

Photos: Wade Barillaro

A Brazil flag and an array of international foods such as empanadas, egg rolls, fruit and parfaits from the buffet.

Students getting platefuls of food from the buffet selection at the fair.

Nursing major Lyzet Campos, a sophomore, biology major Digna Paucay, a junior, Nancy Walton, a graduate, and business administration major Nazia Orya, a sophomore, standing for a photo.

Carlos Arboleda, a world language department professor, giving information to students about Salamanca, Spain.

Political science major Alexandra Belford, a junior accompanied by her dog Ghost, and Manuel Divino, the university public relations manager for ISEP Study Abroad program, sitting at the ISEP table at the fair.

Students performed Latin, Jazz and Blues

Interdisciplinary studies major Marc Mascola, a senior, introducing the Blues Ensemble members.

Music therapy major Imani Tyson, a senior and the vocalist for the Jazz Standards Ensemble singing.

Lily Rand
Photo Editor

On Nov. 19, the Latin Jazz Ensemble, Jazz Standards Ensemble and Blues Ensemble performed in Engleman Hall Room C112. The concert brought a lively mix of music to campus and highlighted the talent of students in the program. Directed by faculty members, the ensembles showcased a range of styles, from the rhythmic energy of Latin jazz to the soulful traditions of blues and the timeless appeal of jazz standards. The performance gave the audience an opportunity to hear how students applied their classroom studies to live music. Each group presented selections that celebrated the diversity of jazz and blues traditions while demonstrating the skill and dedication of the student musicians. Audience members enjoyed a midweek break filled with music that enriched the cultural life of the university. The ensembles underscored how performance opportunities helped students grow as musicians while preparing them for careers in the music industry and beyond.

Photos: Lily Rand

Blues Ensemble standing on stage to take a bow after their performance.

Latin Jazz Ensemble gathering together to pose for a photo on stage.

Jazz Standards Ensemble about to take a bow after performing.

Music major Shirley Zullo, a junior, singing during the Blues Ensemble's performance.

Music major Sherron Williamson, a senior, and music therapy major Katyushka Pitre, a junior, singing for Latin Jazz Ensemble.

James Martin, the adjunct instructor of guitar and Blues Ensemble director, talking about his band.