Fun At Music Bingo Fundraiser Benefits NH High School Culinary Arts Program

North Haven: The first-ever Music Bingo fundraiser hosted by the North Haven Education Foundation (NHEF) drew some knowledgeable players, who knew their Maren Morris from their Taylor Swift songs and were a challenge to stump.

Emcee Anthony Apuzzo played snippets of songs and the bingo participants - who ranged from elementary schoolers to seniors - scanned their cards for the artist names in the hopes of getting all the squares across, down, or diagonally. That's Music Bingo!

A portion of the profits from the fundraiser went to the Culinary Arts program, which provided a diverse menu during the Feb. 27 bingo evening held in the Middle School cafeteria.

Thank you to all who participated!

"I Climbed Mt. Etna" A Story I Never Told

Recently I revealed an episode about my younger days to my daughter. It didn't seem perilous at the time, but it could have ended in a catastrophe. When you are young, you think you are invincible.

Rising over 10,000 ft. on the island of Sicily, which is located off the "boot" of Italy, is Mt. Etna. For the 1½ years I was there in the Navy, Mt. Etna was always smoking and in 2025 it erupted three times and was very unstable.

At some point in time, my two friends and I decided to climb Mt. Etna, having no radio, no water and without a guide. About halfway up the mountain, one of my friends turned back down because of the sulphur fumes. My other friend and I continued and upon reaching the top, peered in and saw molten lava boiling. We did not stay long and headed back down in a hurry through knee-high cinders from previous eruptions.

Unfortunately, I did not have a camera to document our climb, which could have been a disaster. It was a great experience but don't indulge in something you may not come back from.
