QU, NHFD Partner To Give Students Hands-On Emergency Medicine Experience

Pictured: North Haven firefighter/paramedic Mark Santore and Pina Violano, clinical associate professor of nursing and director of community engagement programming for Quinnipiac's School of Nursing, show students how to do CPR on a mannequin. (Quinnipiac University).

North Haven: Students in Quinnipiac University's High School Summer Nursing Program gained firsthand insight into emergency medicine through a collaborative training session on Tuesday with the North Haven Fire Department.

Deputy Chief Scott Bisson and firefighter/paramedics Mark Santore and Ethan Simmel visited Quinnipiac's North Haven Campus with a rescue ambulance to demonstrate how emergency responders assess and treat patients experiencing cardiac emergencies before they arrive at the hospital.

The interactive session included a mock 911 call, CPR practice using a mannequin, training with an automated external defibrillator (AED), an ambulance tour and an overview of the differences between prehospital and hospital-based care.

Bisson said the demonstration was designed to help students understand how emergency medical services and hospital providers work together to improve patient outcomes.

The session complemented coursework students completed throughout the summer nursing program, including anatomy and physiology labs, cardiac emergency instruction, electrocardiogram (EKG) activities and cardiac resuscitation training.

Pina Violano, clinical associate professor of nursing and director of community engagement programming for Quinnipiac University's School of Nursing, said the partnership gives students a broader understanding of the patient care process before individuals arrive at the hospital.

The collaboration highlights the shared commitment of Quinnipiac University and the North Haven Fire Department to preparing the next generation of healthcare professionals through hands-on learning and community partnerships. By exposing students to emergency medical services alongside nursing education, the program provides a more complete view of the healthcare system and the teamwork required to deliver quality patient care.

Question & Answer - Dr. Richard Durocher

Q: I think I have a hammertoe. What is the condition and what can I do about it?

A: A hammertoe deformity is a condition where the toes curl at the joints. This can occur in one toe or several toes. As this condition progresses, the affected toe joints can become enlarged and deformed. The hammertoe can also cause painful corns and calluses on the toe from abnormal presssures in your shoes. This can make walking difficult.

Heredity, injury and certain diseases such as arthritis are some causes of this deformity. Tight pointed or small shoes as well as a muscle imbalance are also causes. In the early stages of this deformity, especially in young children, the podiatrist might treat the hammertoe by altering the footwear or prescribe orthotics. Orthotics are shoe inserts that will help correct the muscle imbalance and position of the foot. In advanced cases where the toe is unable to straighten conservatively and the toe is very painful, surgical management of the toe might be necessary.

Contact Dr. Durocher for an evaluation of this condition.
