This Month The North Haven Historical Society And Museums Will Feature All Things Victorian

North Haven: Starting on December 7, visitors will see how North Haveners lived during Queen Victoria's time. Two events will run that day – Saturday, Dec. 7 @ 2 PM – North Haven Memorial Library – "A Christmas Carol" at the library, read by Kenneth Noll portraying Charles Dickens, and from 2 to 4 PM – Cultural Center, 27 Broadway – a Victorian exhibit at the Cultural Center. Both events will begin at 2 PM; there will be ample time after the Dickens program to visit the exhibit at the Cultural Center. Spend an entire afternoon in our town center, strolling from the library after hearing this timeless holiday story, across the parking lot to the Cultural Center for a look at our latest exhibit.

To attend the program "A Christmas Carol", please visit the library's Programs/Events page at: https://northhaven.librarycalendar.com/event/a-christmas-carol

Both events are free and open to the public – there is plenty of parking on site, but please know that the Cultural Center is not handicapped-accessible. For more information, call 203-239-7722, or email us at nhhistsoc@gmail.com.

QU EMS Receives Special Recognition at The Hamden Fire Department's Awards Ceremony

Quinnipiac University's student-run Emergency Medical Services, also known as "QU EMS," received special recognition at the Hamden Fire Department's awards ceremony on Tuesday, Nov. 26.

QU EMS was honored for "partnership and support in community-based medicine," in particular for collaborating with the Hamden Police and Fire departments to offer a summer program that was aimed at inspiring careers in public safety.

"This award means a lot, especially since we've established such a strong connection with the Hamden Fire Department," QU EMS member Molly DeMeo said.

In July, the university hosted a free, one-week program to teach and train Hamden's leaders of tomorrow on the Mount Carmel Campus. During the week, Hamden High School students learned about public safety through classroom instruction and hands-on interactions, including CPR and first aid training, handling a high-pressure water hose, and discovering the sophisticated tools of the Fire Department's mobile command vehicle and armored vehicle.

In recognizing Quinnipiac, Hamden Fire Capt. Julio Lopes praised the leadership and advisors of QU EMS as well as Janelle Chiasera, a professor of biomedical sciences who was dean of the School of Health Sciences when the idea for the camp was proposed. He said the summer program came together at break-neck speed.

You didn't just help us create a program; you helped us create a model for how universities and emergency services can work together to serve their communities," Lopes said. "You see, when we talk about the fire service and our partnerships it's not just about fighting fires or responding to emergencies – it's about building bridges, creating opportunities and inspiring those around us.

"It's about institutions like Quinnipiac University stepping up to make a real difference in their community," he added. "This program isn't just a success story – it's a blueprint for what we can achieve when we dare to dream big and work together."

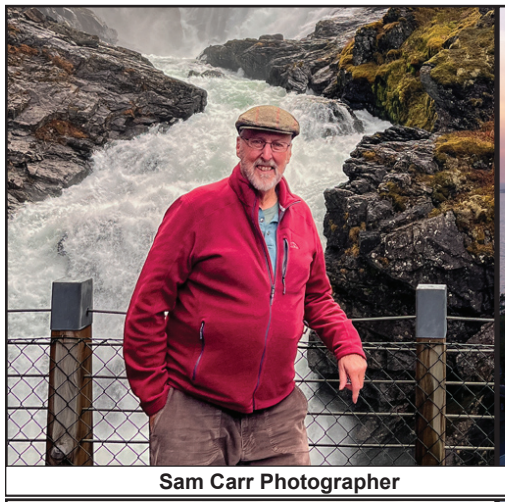

Becca Lucas, a QU EMS faculty adviser, accepted the award on behalf of the organization.

"It is such an honor," she said. "Our students do a great job of running the EMS organization on campus, and we have such an excellent relationship with both the Hamden Fire and Police departments."

In addition to the honoring QU EMS group, student member Brooke Boisvert received individual recognition for her help during a cardiac arrest call while doing a ride along with Hamden FD in September.

"Having an extra set of hands on that day allowed us to control the tempo," Hamden Fire Capt. Michael Dowling said. "This was a great experience for Brooke. It was a great team effort that led to a positive outcome."

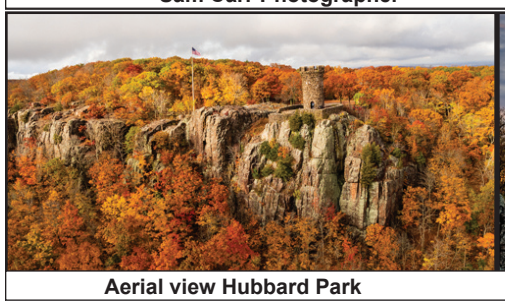

Is it a Drone or a Flying Camera?

The North Haven Camera Club is thrilled to host aerial photographer Sam Carr, who will present a captivating program on the photographic potential of drone imagery. The event will take place on Tuesday, December 10th at 7 PM in the club's meeting room at Hope Church, 211 Montowese Avenue.

Sam's presentation will explore the unique perspectives and creative possibilities offered by aerial photography, highlighting its dramatic impact on a photographer's vision. While he will touch on essential drone rules and regulations, the focus will be on showcasing stunning images captured across the USA, Canada, Europe, and Scandinavia, as well as discussing this rapidly growing aspect of both photography and aviation.

With a passion for photography that dates back to the late 1960s and flying experience beginning in the 1990s, Sam brings a wealth of knowledge to the discussion. He holds a private pilot license for single-engine airplanes and a commercial drone license from the FAA. His work has been featured in local and regional galleries, and he is a partner at Oculus Photography Workshops as well as the owner of Aerial View Photography.

The North Haven Camera Club hosts dynamic events twice a month: the second Tuesday is dedicated to guest speakers like Sam, and the fourth Tuesday features a Zoom-based photo competition. The competitions aim to help members refine their skills, focusing on composition and presentation.

Whether you are an experienced photographer or just beginning to explore the field, this is an opportunity to learn from an expert in aerial imagery and connect with a community of enthusiasts.
