Planning a Visitation to Include All

There are many ways to celebrate a life, pay respects, and support a family when someone passes. A visitation (also called a wake, viewing, or calling hours) takes place before a burial and is less formal than a funeral. A visitation offers a meaningful way to include the deceased's friends and acquaintances when a small, intimate funeral is planned. A visitation once was considered an opportunity to see the deceased one last time while saying final goodbyes. A modern visitation focuses more on supporting the deceased's family. A visitation is usually informal, often held at home or a funeral home. Guests can come and go as they please, pay a short visit, or stay to chat for a while.

When you participate in the planning of the funeral service, you help create a meaningful experience for everyone. Our goal is to help people complete the relationship with the one who has died and to provide a climate that encourages each person to give and receive emotional support. To learn more, please call 203-239-1179. We are located at 36 Washington Avenue.

Quote: "Death is no more than passing from one room into another. But there's a difference for me, you know. Because in that other room I shall be able to see."
