

CCSU's ROTC cadets watch as veterans receive awards for their bravery; Elijah Hernandez The Recorder

CCSU Salutes Its Heroes: Veterans Day Ceremony Celebrates Service and Sacrifice

By Nicolina Coronis
Staff Writer

In a proud salute to those who served, the Central Connecticut State University Veterans Affairs Department honored the heroes who have worn the nation's uniform.

Led by Interim Dean Dr. Gilbert Gigliotti, the department hosted a heartfelt Veterans Day ceremony recognizing student veterans, active-duty members and others whose courage and sacrifice continue to inspire the university community.

The event began with a performance of the national anthem, followed by a touching rendition of "Amazing Grace" from the CCSU Wind Ensemble. The music set a solemn and respectful tone as attendees gathered to reflect on the meaning of service, patriotism and sacrifice.

Three veterans and active-duty members were honored. The Student Veteran Award was presented to Andrew Willard, who served four years in the U.S. Air Force. Willard reflected on the appreciation for those who have served.

"You see people going out and getting the recognition they really didn't have ... it's cool seeing all the ceremonies happening," Willard said.

The Great Elm VFW Post 9945 Wethersfield Veterans Scholarship was awarded to U.S. Army Guard Specialist Alexa M. Duran. The Veterans Public Service Award for excellence was awarded to U.S. Navy Reserve Cmdr. John R. Buckley.

The ceremony gave recognition to those awarded and to the branches of the military. In a speech delivered by Gigliotti, he advised people on how to properly recognize a veteran.

"How can we pay our respects

See Veterans on Page 2

Smith's Late Game Heroics Helps Central Upset Boston College

By Noah Gavin
Staff Writer

CHESTNUT HILL, Mass. — As time ran down at Conte Forum, Blue Devils sophomore forward Darin Smith Jr. made a bucket in traffic to push Central to a one-point lead over Boston College. The Eagles had just three seconds to respond, but they missed the jumper. The Blue Devils erupted in celebration on the court, with hugs and fist bumps galore, as Central won.

In the 60-59 victory, senior guard Melo Sanchez tied for the game high with 17 points off the bench, and Smith added 14 points and five rebounds to go along with his game-winner.

The Blue Devils entered a loud Atlantic Coast Conference arena and took care of business. It is the first time

CCSU won a men's basketball game against Boston College.

Smith didn't let the clock or the environment get to him and had only one thought on his mind as the game hung in the balance.

"Just finish the game," he said. "Just make the right play to win the game."

Smith thinks that finishing wins against schools like this is just another day at the office for the Blue Devils.

"We work out and our team works every day for moments like this," he said.

He knows how much the hard work pays off for the team.

"[This game] shows the heart

See Upset on Page 5

James Jones coming up with a huge block; Noah Gavin The Recorder

About

The Recorder is a student-produced publication and does not necessarily represent, in whole or in part, the views of the CCSU administration, faculty, staff or students. The Recorder's articles, photographs and graphics are property of The Recorder and may not be reproduced or published without written permission from the Editor-in-Chief.

News Editor

Elijah Hernandez

Sports Editor

Marcus Saunders

Social Media Editor

Jameson Lynch

Copy Editor

Nathalia Blair

Photo Copy Editor

Ian Yale

Staff Writers

Nicolina Coronis

Nicholas Dest

Lorenzo Gagliotta

Noah Gavin

Kyle Zarnoch

ContributorsCo-Editors-in-Chief

Elijah Hernandez

&

Marcus Saunders

Meetings

Thursdays at 3:00 p.m.

Recorder Room

Student Center

THE RECORDER OFFICE

Student Center

1615 Stanley Street

New Britain, CT 06050

860-832-3744

editor@centralrecorder.org

CentralRecorder.org

Printed By:

Valley Publishing Company

SCAN FOR OUR LINKS

Veterans Continued From Page 1

to our veterans ... two words: thank you," Gigliotti said.

Buckley followed that by addressing the need for patriotism.

"This hall should be filled ... think about the sacrifices families have made," Buckley said.

Christian Gutierrez, who works for the Veterans Affairs Department at CCSU, shared how the department is there for students.

"Central is recognized as a military-friendly school ... at one point these people were in uniform out there and now they are reintegrating into society ... and that's where we come in, and the university," Gutierrez said.

The event also allowed time to speak with veterans who were there to show their support for the award recipients.

Veteran Raymond L. Carrier attended the event and sat on stage as someone who has received these awards in the past. Carrier expressed deep respect for military members.

"The warmest thing to a veteran's heart is that they've recognized that even though some of us didn't return, some of us did, and they deserve our thanks," Carrier said.

OPINION

Zohran Mamdani during his acceptance speech talk about the future he has planned for New York City; photo credit ABC7 New York

Zohran Mamdani's City of Ember

By Nicholas Dest
Staff Writer

New York, the largest capitalist city in the world, has just elected a democratic socialist mayor.

Zohran Mamdani uses a mixture of charisma and utopianism to sell his vision for solving the city's affordability crisis.

His upbeat presentation reassures voters, especially Gen Z, that his policies will function in practice. Yet cities that have adopted similar promises rarely manage to keep them.

Consider his promise of fare-free buses. The idea sounds utopian, and in fact it is, as the real-world record demonstrates.

Kansas City was the first major U.S. city to make buses fully free starting in 2020. Once the Covid stimulus dried up, the program faced major budget shortfalls totaling $30 million. The city recently announced buses will no longer be free in 2026.

Washington D.C. passed legislation to make buses fare-free in 2022 but ultimately terminated the policy due to a lack of funding.

Salt Lake City introduced "Fare Free February," a temporary pilot program in 2022, which the city deemed a "success" city. Yet the program hasn't been reintroduced since, perhaps due to budget strains.

These are just a few examples of many, illustrating the failed adoption of socialist programs in U.S. cities.

Mamdani also promises government-sponsored grocery stores and subsidized childcare. These are ambitious programs that would further strain New York's already narrow tax base. But the idea, in theory, is to fund these programs through increased taxes on corporations and high-net-worth individuals.

Interestingly, Mamdani's beliefs contradict the revenue model he plans to enact, declaring "I don't think we should have billionaires."

Without taking from billionaires and high-net-worth individuals every one of his policies will crumble, but pleasing the everyday New Yorker with such statements likely took precedence over reality.

In fact, that sentiment seems to be the backbone of his entire agenda, grounded in fantasy and detached from an entry-level economics course.

When a city builds its future dependent on high earners, its priority should be keeping them, not driving them away. And if the group that already contributes roughly half of the tax revenue decides to leave, Mamdani's City of Dreams will begin to resemble a City of Ember—glowing with promise but destined to fail once the power goes out.

Have a story that needs to be told?
Tips or ledes that should be investigated?
Email us at elijahh@my.ccsu.edu or fill out the contact form on our website
centralrecorder.org

Commuter Column

Lunch Box or Devil's Den? Commuters Crunch the Numbers Before They Eat

By Nicolina Coronis
Staff Writer

As the lunch rush hits the Student Center, both commuters and residents face the daily dilemma of finding the perfect place to eat on campus, a spot that fits their budget, tastes good and is convenient. But for many, limited dining options and tight schedules make eating on campus more of a challenge than a break.

Between the buzzing Student Center, the all-you-can-eat setup at Memorial Hall, and the classic options at Hilltop Café, CCSU students are constantly weighing cost against convenience and the possibility of meal plans.

When it comes to eating between classes, there's one question every commuter asks at some point: Do I eat on campus or try to bring and store my own lunch? Bringing food from home comes with its own challenges, like figuring out how to keep it fresh between classes. Moments like that make you wish a car refrigerator came standard with your parking pass.

Freshman Ceirsten Carrethers prefers bringing her lunch to campus as a more cost-effective way to eat throughout the day.

"I feel like it's a cheaper option because you can bring multiple things, not just one meal for a price of multiple," Carrethers said.

The trick to keeping lunch on campus is selecting nonrefrigerated options so a commuter can keep their lunch in their bag or car; however, this tends to become boring.

With pricey options on campus, Carrethers is not the only commuter who brings a meal to campus. When a commuter has classes multiple times a week, the price of meals adds up fast, becoming a weekly bill on top of that lovely weekly gas bill.

The Student Center attracts a lot of commuters because there is no need for a meal plan there, like at Memorial Hall. Commuter Pacificue Kalala sees the cost of food on campus as a challenge for commuters.

"I enjoy Devil's Den. When you're a commuter and buying it, like $20 here and $20 there, it's kind of discouraging," Kalala said.

Kalala was a former resident and shares both sides of the story.

"I will definitely say when I lived on campus, Devil's Den was my favorite, and dining hall-wise, Hilltop," Kalala said.

Dining halls can be foreign to commuters because of the need for meal plans. Some commuters have found meal plans beneficial, especially if they find themselves on campus for the majority of the week. A commuter meal plan could be a potential solution to lowering the weekly cost of commuter life.

Commuter Cody Dzis has go-to spots, and spots to avoid.

"Usually, I like to order from Sub Connection. From my experiences ordering at each one, they're the most consistent with the amount of time it takes to make the orders ... and they always get my order correct," Dzis said. "The Grille is the other go-to spot for me, because if I want more dinner-type food, if I'm at campus later in the day, it's a great choice."

Costs for the food options at Devil's Den, to Dzis, are something that seems understandable.

"I feel as if there are solid prices on sandwiches because with everything the school needs to purchase for their kitchen's inventory, it costs a pretty penny, and people probably don't realize that. I'd say the food is priced fairly for the most part," Dzis said.

With a mostly great review of the Student Center options and prices, Dzis has a final thought on Qdoba and Sal's missing the mark.

"The quality of the pizza at Sal's needs to be improved, in my humble opinion, as a guy who loves all food," he said. "It's not bad, but the cheese easily falls off like it's elementary school lunch pizza. I don't want to spend my hard-earned money on that."

"Qdoba has some flaws; their portion sizes, from my experience at least, have been significantly low, and they take a long time to get your food out," Dzis said. "If I want to wait that long to get half a serving of rice and beans with meat in a container, I'll just go to a grocery store and make it all myself."

Devil's Den may win on taste and convenience, but for commuters balancing growing budgets, bringing food from home often proves the better option.

This Week's Campus Events

Beyond Access: Tackling Disparities in Reproductive and Maternal Health, Nov. 13, 4:15 p.m.

Willard DiLoreto D121

Cannonball Free Swim, Nov. 13, 8:30 p.m.

Kaiser Hall

AI Hackathon Competition!, Nov. 18, 7 p.m.

Robert Vance 005

There are designated parking garages for commuters, but are there designated food options on campus?; Elijah Hernandez The Recorder

A Sweep in Three Gets CCSU's Volleyball Team One Step Closer to Playoffs

By Elijah Hernandez
Co-Editor-In-Chief

Bounce, bounce, bounce, bounce, silence — as the ball gracefully rises in the air, the women of CCSU's volleyball team get into loaded positions and eagerly await the ball to soar overhead. As the fragile score of 24-24 clings to the will of the opposing team, the overwhelming power of Central's front line pushes the University of New Haven Chargers to their limit.

In a game where one minute turns to five and a blink of an eye could cause you to miss the sweltering speed of CCSU's attack, the Blue Devils completed a sweep of three sets against the Chargers on Nov. 8 in Detrick Gymnasium.

The gym was full of cheers from supporters in the stands and echoed by both benches, opting to never sit but instead fuel their teammates with the passion necessary to get a much-needed win.

Throughout the game there were moments showcasing unwavering chemistry between setter Anja Milosevic and the rest of the team, with her finishing the game with 41 assists. This contribution, 89% of the team's total assists, was essential for middle blocker Breanna Ginley to convert plays to points.

"I wouldn't have been able to get a lot of my kills if it weren't for Anja setting me up," Ginley said. "The pass always comes first, so having Anja there is really important to that success."

Throughout the game, Ginley made momentum-halting blocks, effortlessly tipped the ball to the other side of the net to force mistakes and selflessly made her rounds in and out of the rotation to effectively utilize her presence.

However, the stakes of the game were anything but just another day at work for the players. The game was senior night, and the difference between winning and losing meant putting a playoff run in jeopardy.

For outside hitter Weronika Poczynek, the arrival of her family was invigorating, and so were the stakes the volleyball team was playing for.

"Last season, around this time, we knew we weren't going to make it, but now we can still hope to have playoff success," she said. "With it being senior night and everything, we were definitely motivated, and it made today's sweep even better."

Poczynek had a momentous showing, scoring 17 kills in front of her family, who had to travel thousands of miles to see her in her element.

Strength in numbers can go a long way; Elijah Hernandez The Recorder

For the volleyball seniors, this was a bittersweet moment as they celebrate their legacy; Elijah Hernandez The Recorder

"I actually haven't seen them in six months, so this night was really special for me," she said. "They live all the way in Poland, so they came all the way here to see my final game at CCSU."

This road was anything but easy for a volleyball team hoping to take its program to the next level. Prior to senior night, in their first bout with the Chargers, they dropped the first two sets of that match and had to claw their way back to get the win.

The change in pace for the Blue Devils led to them winning six straight sets over the course of two days. Head coach Alyssa Broccoli said the effort shows what the women are capable of.

"We've been in situations like these before, and we haven't been as successful," she said. "All the points on the board are mistakes ... but we came in more confident than yesterday and we got the job done."

Broccoli said that leading up to this series, they've been taking a game-by-game mindset to avoid stressing the players in a time of urgency.

"We're not going to practice crazy hard or treat these next few games as being different than the earlier games we've played," she said. "Our goal was to accomplish today by coming in and handling our business."

With the matchup against FDU determining the outcome of the team's postseason, every game, every set, every point matters to these women.

"Job's not finished," Ginley said.

Darin Smith Jr. (5) got to the line for clutch free throws; Noah Gavin The Recorder and the passion we have for the game and all the work we put in and film we watch to get to this point," Smith said.

Upset Continued From Page 1

Boston College opened the game with eight unanswered points. Sophomore forward Jayden Mott drove inside to make a towering dunk to open up Central's scoring. CCSU then got back-to-back three-pointers courtesy of Smith, followed by senior guard Gabe Spinelli, to cut the BC lead to two.

CCSU kept the game close by continuing to make three-pointers and cleaning the glass on defense. Turnovers were an issue for Central with six in the first half, as the Eagles forced four steals.

The Eagles ran into foul trouble, and Central capitalized, hitting six of seven free throws in the half to trail just 30-26 at halftime.

The second half opened with a battle.

The Eagles made two baskets, with the second Central shot clock violation of the game coming in between. However, the Blue Devils would answer back with an electric alley-oop from junior forward Max Frazier, off a pass from Jay Rodgers.

Following an outside make from Sanchez, the BC Eagles scored four points on free throws to begin pulling away from Central, around five minutes into the second half.

Central would continue to try to fight for their first lead as the second half went on and kept the score just within ten to eleven points for the first ten minutes of the second half, thanks to several makes from beyond the arc.

The Blue Devils pulled within one after drawing a few fouls from the Eagles and making their free throws. They also forced several misses from the Eagles offense up to the halfway point of the second half, locking down the interior.

Eventually, off of a steal from

Frazier, Central took their first lead of the contest with seven minutes left to play in the second half, coming off yet another Rodgers and Frazier alley-oop connection following the BC turnover.

The score was 55-54 Blue Devils, as they successfully erased an 11-point BC lead.

Both teams would struggle to score for the next few minutes. BC briefly regained the lead before Central tied it 56-56 with a free throw. Sophomore forward James Jones hit a jumper to give the Blue Devils a two-point lead, but the Eagles led by one with a minute remaining.

They kept this lead all the way until Smith Jr. made his decisive shot with just under four seconds left to play in the game, coming off a Central timeout after important lockdown defense to contest an Eagles three-pointer.

After forcing a miss out of BC guard Donald Hand Jr. at the other end following Smith's make, the Blue Devils sealed the win.

Spinelli credits the big Blue Devil win to hard practice and the fact that they were able to feed off the opposing fans' energy.

"At the end of the day, this is stuff we do every day in practice, and I think we were really well prepared [for this game]," he said. "The energy [in Conte Forum] was great, and we built off of that really well."

Spinelli knows that the sky is the limit for this team when they play with cooperation.

"We're a really tight knit group, and we work really hard in practice," Spinelli said. "And if we just build every single day in practice, Coach [Sellers] uses the terminology, 'build the avalanche [of points], and keep continuing to add to that boulder.'"

Head coach Patrick Sellers was very happy with how his guys "added to that boulder" in tonight's comeback and never thought the game was in doubt thanks to the Central defense.

"Our guys did a great job paying attention to the scouting report," Sellers said. "We wanted to shut the paint down, and for the most part we were able to do that."

Sellers said not only was the noise in Conte Forum not a factor, but an environment that the Blue Devils excel in.

"We've played in a lot of hostile environments, so our guys really enjoy it," Sellers said. "Last year we were the number one or number two road team in America, so we like playing on the road."

The Blue Devils head to Amherst to play the UMass Minutemen on Nov. 16 at the William D. Mullins Memorial Center, looking to win two of their first three games on their four-game road trip.

CCSU Demolishes Stonehill, One Win From Reclaiming NEC Throne

By Kyle Zarnoch
Staff Writer

NEW BRITAIN
— One year ago, Central Connecticut State found itself in a near-identical position: one win away from a Northeast Conference championship. The Blue Devils delivered then, and now they stand on the precipice of history once more.

CCSU dismantled Stonehill 40-10 Saturday at Arute Field, moving one step closer to defending its NEC championship and securing an automatic berth in the FCS playoffs.

“We’ve been talking about it. If we could put together a complete game, we’d have a chance to do this... we hadn’t, people hadn’t done it until today,” head coach Adam Lechtenberg said. “I felt like we played pretty good on all sides. Stonehill’s a good team. They played everybody close. They got a good defense. So, we had to play well, and I was proud of our kids for executing for the most part all the way through the game.”

The Blue Devils (7-3, 5-0 NEC) remain the conference’s lone unbeaten team and have won nine straight NEC games dating back to last season. With one game remaining, a victory over Duquesne next week would clinch CCSU’s second consecutive conference championship and guarantee a postseason berth.

“Job’s not finished, and we got a full head of steam, and we’re going to the end,” junior linebacker Jack Stoll said.

Saturday’s victory was never in doubt. CCSU scored on five of its first six possessions, building a 23-0 lead before Stonehill (3-7, 2-3 NEC) even reached the end zone. The Blue Devils racked up 533 total yards while holding the Skyhawks to just 220.

Running back Elijah Howard provided the game’s most electrifying moment early in the second quarter. Taking a handoff near his own goal line, Howard found a seam up the middle before cutting off his blockers and sprinting 93 yards for a touchdown, the longest run of his career.

“Man, it was a great call,” Howard said. “He [Donovan Wadley] was like, ‘Man, don’t be indecisive. Hit it up off my behind.’ And I did that, and I kind of saw the safety coming and cut it off him. And man, O-line did that thing up front. It was just a beautiful play all around.”

Howard finished with 178 yards and two touchdowns on just 17 carries, averaging 10.5 yards per attempt. He surpassed 100 yards for the 12th time in his career and now leads the NEC in scoring with 7.3 points per game. The senior entered Saturday with performance, completing 20 of 30 passes for 261 yards and two touchdowns without an interception. Ricky Ortega and Sean O’Brien each caught 12-yard touchdown passes, their only receptions of the game.

“From the start they executed, and that’s what we’re capable of,” Lechtenberg said. “When we don’t beat ourselves, we have a chance to be a really good offense. We have a lot of good, skilled kids. And today we made some plays. Brady always plays

29 attempts.

Stoll led the defensive effort with seven total tackles and 2.5 tackles for loss. Linebacker Eric Jackson added 11 tackles, while Wayne Coleman, Derek Berlitz, Gavin Taylor, and Carter Banks each recorded a sack. Coleman’s sack resulted in an eight-yard loss.

“The beautiful thing about our defense is when everyone does their jobs, starting with the D-line being aggressive, you’re able to make big-time plays, and it’s a lights-out defense,” Stoll said.

The defensive line and linebacker hill finally answered with a Cole Clarke touchdown reception just before halftime.

The Blue Devils added two more touchdowns in the second half, with O’Brien’s 12-yard catch making it 33-10 in the third quarter and Ortega’s 12-yard reception in the fourth, putting the game out of reach.

CCSU converted 12 of 14 third-down attempts and controlled possession for nearly 30 minutes. The fifth consecutive victory marks the program’s longest winning streak since 2019, when the Blue Devils won their final eight regular-season games.

The Blue Devils now lead the all-time series against Stonehill 3-1, having won nine straight conference games overall. CCSU plays three of its four November games at home, where the team is 10-1 over the past two seasons.

Next Saturday’s showdown with Duquesne will determine whether the Blue Devils can cap off an undefeated conference season. The Dukes (5-5, 3-2 NEC) will host Central for a rematch of last year’s season finale, when CCSU emerged victorious to claim the conference crown.

“It’s a game to go,” Lechtenberg said. “We all know Duquesne’s a really good team. We know they’re going to be ready for us. We beat them here last year. Regardless of what happens in the LIU game, they’ll be ready for us, and it’s going to be a huge game for us to have a chance to win.”

Howard emphasized the team’s singular focus moving forward.

“It doesn’t matter who it is, just keep doing our thing,” he said. “We got to come out and finish the game. This is us building trust with each other and coming down and finishing. I feel like we’re ready to compete versus anybody.”

The stage is set. One more win, and the Blue Devils will reign supreme once again.

Elijah Howard (7) breaking away for a 93-yard touchdown; Steve McLaughlin

3,368 all-purpose yards for his career, eighth among active FCS players, and his 2,533 career rushing yards rank eighth among active players and fourth all-time at CCSU.

The performance came one week after a subpar outing against Long Island.

“Great recognition and preparation. That’s where it started,” Howard said. “I kind of was a little indecisive two weeks ago in practice, and it showed during the game. So, me and Coach got that figured out, and we were all gas this week.”

Quarterback Brady Olson complemented Howard’s rushing attack with an efficient passing well and played well again today. But our skill kids really made a lot of plays.”

The offensive line, featuring several young players continuing to develop, paved the way for 266 rushing yards on 34 carries.

“Our O-line played really well today. I was really proud of them,” Lechtenberg said. “So many young kids continue to come and get better.”

While the offense controlled possession and scored at will, CCSU’s defense suffocated Stonehill’s attack. The Blue Devils recorded five sacks, 11 tackles for loss, and held the Skyhawks to 60 rushing yards on corps, now in their second year as a cohesive unit, have become the backbone of CCSU’s success.

“Our D-line and our linebackers, that group is a good, talented group we’ve had for two years,” Lechtenberg said. “They just continue to get better. What we’re doing is stopping the run, which gives us a chance to play the pass.”

CCSU opened the scoring on its first possession, marching 78 yards in 12 plays capped by Howard’s 3-yard touchdown run. Donny Marcus added an 11-yard touchdown run later in the first quarter, and Jack Hennessey connected on field goals of 30 and 20 yards. Howard’s 93-yard burst made it 23-0 before Stone-

The Recorder Photo Gallery

Submit your photos to elijahh@my.ccsu.edu to be featured in the next photo gallery

Darin Smith Jr. (5) doesn't know the meaning of contested; Noah Gavin The Recorder

There's always a bright side; Elijah Hernandez The Recorder

In a team rally after the first set, the Blue Devils find success; Elijah Hernandez The Recorder

As the temperatures drop migration begins; Elijah Hernandez The Recorder

Veterans affairs giving flowers to those that deserve it; Elijah Hernandez The Recorder

@CentralRecorder

@TheRecorder

CCSU's Radonic and Ford Cap Off Their Season With NEC Player Awards For Excellence

By Lorenzo Gagliotta
Staff Writer

Midfielder Emma Radonic and goalkeeper Melina Ford of Central Connecticut State's women's soccer team were named the Northeast Conference Defensive Player of the Year and Goalkeeper of the Year, respectively.

Prolonging the program's tradition, both players were also nominated and announced in the All-NEC first team.

Radonic grew from strength to strength throughout the season, being a crucial part of Central's strong defensive record, only conceding one goal per game in NEC action. Alongside that, her versatility showed she was an offensive presence, totaling four goals and two assists throughout the season.

"I've been a midfielder my whole life," she said. "So, with the switch-up this season, I was a little bit nervous going into it," she said.

Radonic mentioned that she was happy to get the award because it made the transition worth it at the end.

After earning NEC Rookie of the Year honors in 2023, she now becomes the 11th Blue Devil to be named the conference's Defensive Player of the Year.

"It's kind of crazy just to see how much it's changed since my freshman year," Radonic said. "But I feel like being a defender, you're kind of doing the job for the team. So, I feel like it's kind of just changed my mindset with that."

Ford's performances saw her lead the conference, securing five clean sheets in NEC play. Her season was filled with countless Prime Performer moments, alongside being a commanding presence in net with over 70 saves made across the season.

"It's an honor to get an award like that," Ford said. "Especially for me, coming off a season-ending injury last year, to be able to play this year and just help my team and be as good as we were this season."

The Goalkeeper of the Year adds her name as the seventh player to win the award in CCSU's program.

"I feel like the fact that I played this year, and people still had confidence with me even after not playing for a year really helped me believe in myself," she said. "They believe in me, and so I should believe in myself, and I need to be the leader that they need."

The Blue Devils have just come off an unfortunate loss in the NEC Championship final game in New Jersey, losing 2-1 against the Wagner Seahawks. While the loss hurts, they can't wait to see what's in store for them next season.

"I feel like it's one of those things where we kind of just have to learn from it because luckily Melina and I do have that other year," Radonic said. "I feel like it's just more motivation and hope of how much better we can even do next year, and it starts now. I'm just excited for us at this time next year."

The women's soccer team prides themselves on their effortless chemistry; Steve McLaughlin

CCSU SCHEDULE

Women's Swimming & Diving

November 14 – Friday Night Sprints at 5 PM

Women's Volleyball

November 14 – @ FDU at 6 PM

November 15 – @ FDU at 1 PM

Men's Basketball

November 16 – @ UMass at 2 PM

Women's Basketball

November 13 – vs. Sacred Heart at 7 PM

November 15 – vs. UMass Lowell at 1 PM

Football

November 15 – @ Duquesne at Noon

