BULLETIN

Behind the Headline

By Nausicaa Chu

Last Thursday, I visited the New Haven Superior Court website to find the court records of a person who tried using a cloned ID last year to break into Berkeley College. I failed. Instead, I randomly clicked on links, somehow ended up on a judge's short calendar and stumbled upon a wrongful death lawsuit filed by a Yale Golf Course landscaper's family against the University.

I emailed the family's lawyer, who said residents near the golf course had complained about hazardous conditions "well before" the landscaper's death. I thought I would simply write a story about the lawsuit. But my editor suggested that I travel to Conrad Drive to speak to the residents themselves. I had just started reporting for the News, and it was my first time knocking on doors. I did not expect the residents to talk to me, much less talk about how they had told Yale about hazardous tree conditions prior to the landscaper's death. A few whirlwind days of emailing, texting and re-texting later, the story went live. I never expected Internet browsing to lead to an article like this, but, as I've learned, anything can happen at the News.

Read "Yale denies fault in fatal accident" on page 1.

ILLUSTRATION BY SASHA CABRAL

This Day in Yale History, 1957.

October 9, 1957 / Pierson Court Considered Site for Parking Lot; Tentative Proposal Praised, Criticized by Faculty

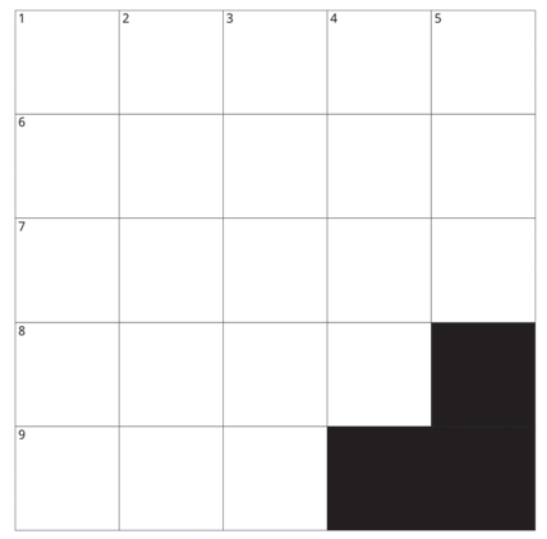

The University is considering a proposal to convert the land behind Pierson College, currently known as Pierson Court, into a parking lot. This proposal has gained a lot of mixed opinions, with one history professor describing it as "absolutely terrible," while a member of the Haunt Club, which uses the space for periodic drinking events, said they don't mind "as long as they leave room for our punch bowl."

Puzzle by Ariana Borut '27

ACROSS
1 Way to pay for a dining hall meal
6 Roster listings
7 Car, house, or stock
8 "Believe" singer
9 Collection of sewing items

DOWN
1 Type of item sold at The Bow Wow
2 Japanese decorative tape
3 "All good here"
4 Classmate, e.g.
5 Superlative suffix

CORRECTION:

Due to an editing error, an earlier version of Emily Akbar's article, "YCC passes statement condemning Lewis," misstated the number of senators who voted for an amendment to a public statement. Six senators, not 20, voted in the amendment's favor.

An earlier version of Lucy Benjamin's article, "This street by Payne Whitney saves time, creates community for athletes," misstated the time of a Nov. 2 basketball game between Yale and Howard. The game is scheduled for 7 p.m., not 1 p.m.

ILLUSTRATION BY GRACE GLADSON

ILLUSTRATION BY GRACE GLADSON

ILLUSTRATION BY ANNA CHAMBERLIN