BULLETIN

Behind the Headline

By Simran Randhawa

This Halloween, I was racing around the Schwarzman Center in a Princess Leia costume, stopping people for interviews instead of leading the Rebel Alliance. I'd written a preview for the Yale Symphony Orchestra's annual Halloween show in Woolsey Hall, but its producers had kept the show's details under wraps, so I was waiting for the reveal alongside everyone else. That night, I interviewed people heading to the show and waiting in the line that stretched out the door. After watching the show, I spoke with conductor Evan Kessler '28 and producers Holly Lacey '29 and Mindy Zhao '29, whose words provided context for my story on the show. I really wanted to capture the performance's energy and give readers a glimpse of all the work that had gone into its production. And I have my friend, YSO oboist Alexander Vakov, to thank for reminding me to buy tickets on time.

Read "'Halantir' and horror headline orchestra Halloween show" on page 8.

Puzzle by Ariana Borut '27

ACROSS
1 Time that daylight savings ends, for short
6 Language from which "cheetah" and "jungle" are derived
7 Largest fencing swords
8 Breakfast, lunch and dinner
9 Humorist Bombeck

DOWN
1 Frequent crossword feature
2 Windshield clearer
3 What 1-Across changes to for the time to "fall back," for short
4 "Ain't in LA" singer
5 Be nostalgic for

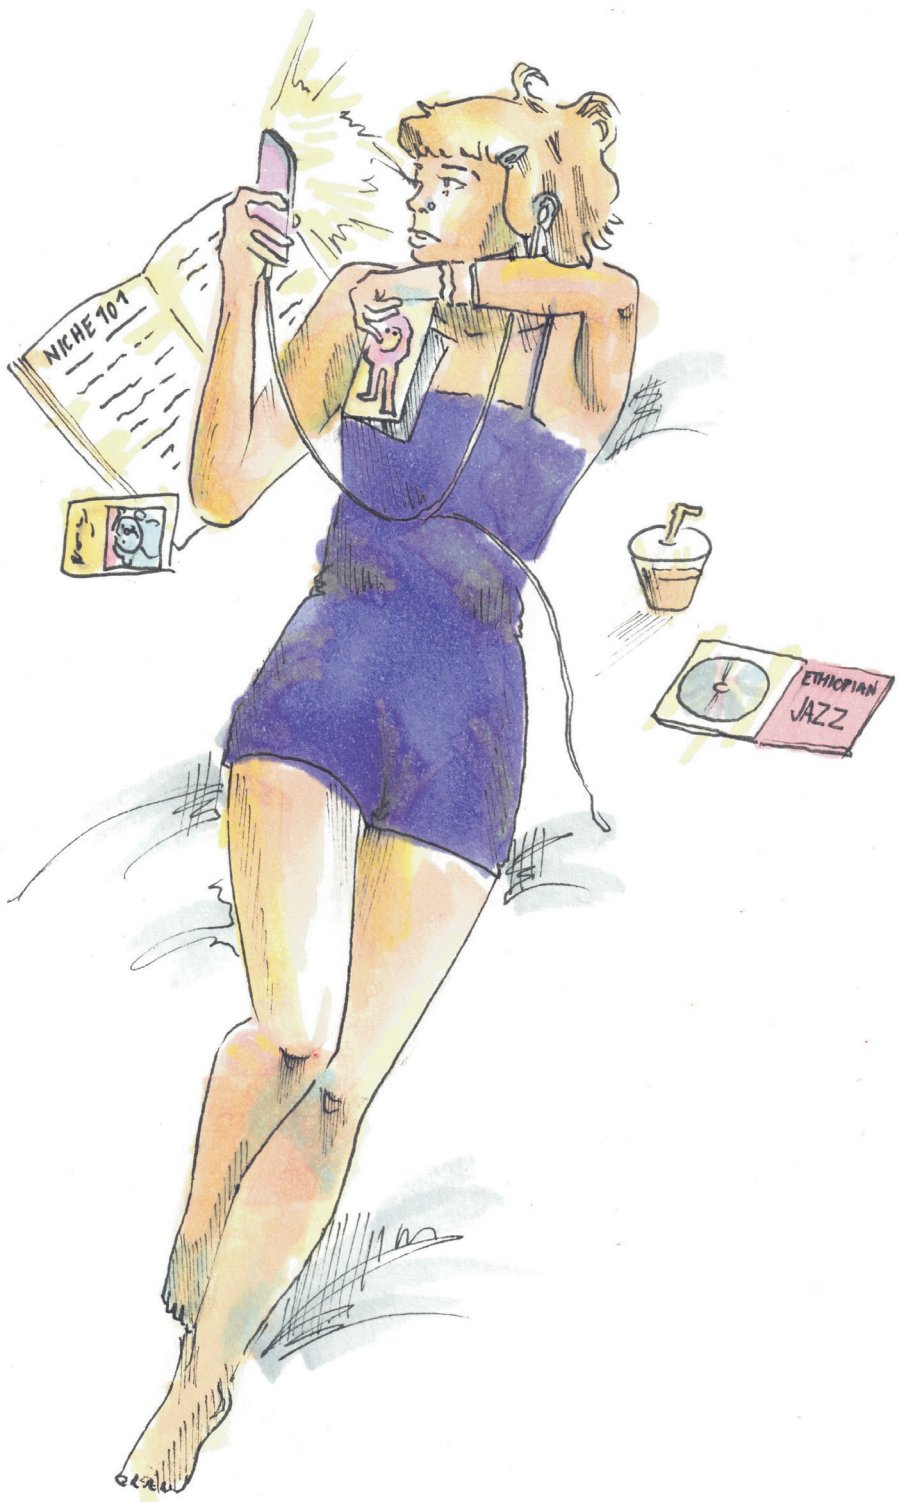

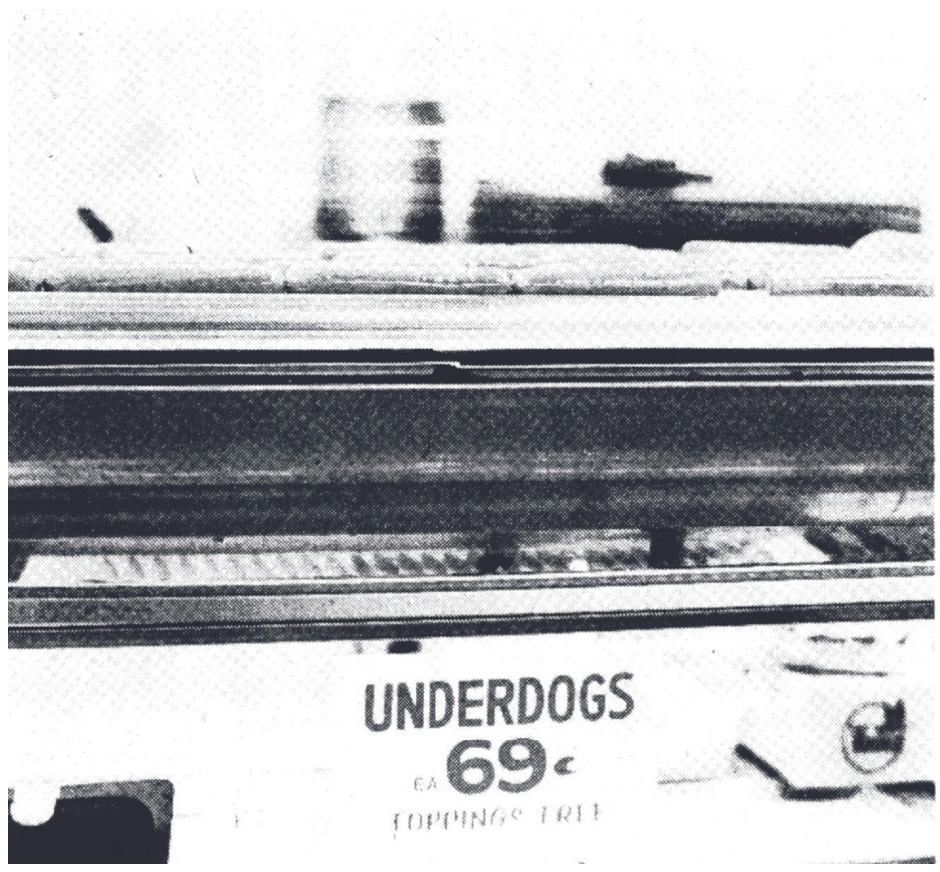

ILLUSTRATION BY LUCAS CASTILLO-WEST

This Day in Yale History, 1986

November 3, 1986 / Wawa's Dogs go up in price; students may switch snacks

By Elaine Golin

Wawa raises the price of a single hot dog to 69 cents. Formerly, two cost 99 cents; now they cost $1.38. Wawa expects a small decline in its current demand of 300-400 hot dogs a day. Competitor Store 24, which sells approximately 20 hot dogs a day, will keep its price of 99 cents for two hot dogs.

CORRECTION:

A previous version of an article by Isabelle Ling, "What to expect at city polls," misstated the seat held by Democrat Alphonse Paolillo Jr. He serves in the state House of Representatives, not as the majority leader of the Board of Alders.

ILLUSTRATION BY JESSAI FLORES

ILLUSTRATION BY JANE CALLANAN